Dear Gregory Pena:

I have received your letter of complaint about not receiving our product as advertised. I apologize that the computer you bought from our outlet did not have all the software that was expected. For the inconvenience, TechnoRad will like to reimburse you.

We will send you a software package containing the fonts, graphics, and grammar check functions that you want. We cannot offer cash reimbursement due to policy, but this software package totals $400 USD, and we are sending it to you free of charge to make up for the misleading advertisement and for the inconvenience to you. We also cannot offer you a technician to load the software for you since they do not make appointments. TechnoRad will send you instructions on how to load the software right from your home. We also have detailed instructions on our company website, TechnoRad.com, on how to install software. You may also walk into any of our outlets, and we will waive the technicians help fee.

You can expect the software to be emailed to you within two business days, or you may request it sent to you by mail. We hope that we have sufficiently reimbursed you for your troubles, and that this incident does not prevent you from buying our products in the future.

Sincerely,

Recoverable Signature
